

This book is one of a series which describe events and discussions in the streets opposite Petts Wood. Many of these events and discussions involve words and thoughts which are full of practical wisdom from the past and present. We can learn in one of the books how Sir Ranulph Fiennes managed to climb Everest using the phrase plod forever, We can learn from a priceless quote from Leonardo da Vinci. Each book has a summary at the end which will help you to remember key lessons about success in life. For example, this book has a key lesson: Your serve in tennis is the one thing that depends on you alone. Your competitor can not stop you sending down a good serve or an ace. It is entirely under your own control. Act on the skills you alone have control over.
