

Azariah [A Dark BBW Paranormal Romance]: 1-5 of the Thicker than Blood Series in a novel

The new cardiologist had it all - good looks, sexy accent... and an ancient and evil past... Kenna had everything she expected to at her age... a good job as a cardiac nurse, a house, and plenty of friends... but something was missing. She certainly didn't expect to find that missing something in the arms of a fallen angel... The first time she meets the tall, dark and gorgeous new cardiologist, Dr. Alex Amante, he sweeps her into a bewilderingly passionate kiss in a patient's room... and then tells her to forget about it! What was his deal? How could he move so fast and so quietly? And why was he fighting so hard to stay away from her? When Alex accidentally reveals his true form to Kenna, the fabric of her reality comes apart.... Could there really be some truth in the ancient myths and legends of vampires and gods? Reader note: This paranormal angel romance novel is the compilation of parts 1-5 of the Thicker than Blood series. This BBW urban fantasy romance is dark and contains disturbing content matter, including themes of non-consent as well as graphic sexual content. Reader discretion is advised.. Excerpt: The handsome cardiologist glanced up at me for a brief second, then proceeded to scribble down a few more notes on the yellow paper, but stopped, pen frozen just above the sheet. I swear that I had seen him shudder slightly; his jaw clenching. He remained still for several seconds, eyes remaining on the doctor's note, but unmoving. His rigid state made me a little uncomfortable. Um, will she be discharged today? I asked, forcing myself to peer out the window into the black night for lack of a better place to settle my eyes. Dr. Amante looked at me and I gasped. His rapacious gaze bored passed my eyes, deep into my skull. I was taken aback by the sheer hunger in his eyes. Uh... doctor? He continued to stare at me as he set the pen on the paper. I could feel the hair rise on the back of my neck. Something was... wrong with this picture. Slowly, he stalked towards me, I took a step back. He kept coming. What the hell?! I backed up as he approached and stopped only when the wall blocked my retreat. I felt like a mouse slinking away from a large, powerful cat. This was not professional behavior but I was unable to say anything as I watched him close the distance between us. He put his hands on the wall next to my face and peered down into my eyes. Why did his eyes look almost black when they had been a caramel before? Weren't they? You smell delicious, he said with a whisper which was closer to a growl. His eyes focused on my lips. Something was wild and feral about his current behavior, like I was Little Red Riding Hood and he was the Big Bad Wolf.
