Shes just a college girl who cant help but dream. Shannon Locklear just won backstage passes to the hottest concert in LA, Wilder Side. Shes thrilled to be able to meet the band backstage, and when the guitarist takes her aside, the sparks that fly between them could light a bonfire...Hes a lead guitarist who cant shake his inner demons. Julian Bremmer is a musician struggling with alcohol and his bands newfound success. Girls throw themselves at him because hes a rock star, but all of the attention doesnt stop him from feeling empty inside. When he meets Shannon, he cant help but wonder if shes just the next girl who wants him for his fame...Fate has thrown them together, but will the world pull them apart?Warning: This 13,000 word story includes explicit sexual content!EXCERPT:Julian had just left when the blond girl to Shannons side stood up and went to sit by her friend. Sitting next to each other, they looked almost like twin Barbie dolls, all made up. They were gorgeous, their hair and nails perfectly done. Shannon examined her nails. Although she had just painted them for the show, one thumbnail was already chipped. How does that happen?Hes cute, dont you think? the tall one said.Well, hes no Alex Wilder.Yeah, but hes famous at least.Kind of famous, the tall girl said dismissively.Fuckable famous, thats for sure.Well obv, just not, you know, really famous. The tall girl shook her long straight hair out.Hes really talented, Shannon said, trying to join in the conversation. The two girls looked over at her with twin gazes of intense disapproval, and Shannon knew immediately she had said the wrong thing.Right, so what, you think he wants to talk to you? The tall girl looked down her nose with distaste.I just meant... he seems nice. And he plays really well, Shannon said, flushing a deep red.Why did you come over here anyway?

the other girl said. We were having a nice conversation. Yeah, echoed the other. A nice conversation. Im sorry, Shannon said, flustered. I thought--Before you showed up. I dont even know why they let people like you in anyway, the girl said, her eyes sweeping down Shannons figure. Shannon immediately felt like she wanted to melt through the floor. Her arms crossed over her chest protectively. It was stupid of her to think she could talk to these girls. They were models, both of them, or could be. Sorry, she whispered, her face still hot with embarrassment. She looked around to see if she could find Jason, but he was gone. So was Julian. She was alone. Give me a mint, the tall girl said to her friend. Shannon saw Julian come back into the room and stop to talk with the drummer. They laughed, and Shannon felt her heart twinge as the guitarists smile lit up his face. Then he turned towards her and the laugh pulled back into a smile again. It was impossible, that he should be smiling at her, but there it was. The blond girls split apart on the couch as the guitarist walked up. Come sit here, Julian, the tall one said. She patted the space between her and her friend. Thanks, but I cant stay, Julian said. Aw, but were going to miss you. Her tone was wheedling. Then youll have to miss me, Julian said. He turned to Shannon, and she stuck out her hand politely. It was really nice to meet you, she said. He took her hand, but not in a handshake. His fingers closed over her palm and he bent down toward her. He was so close that she could smell a hint of his cologne, and she felt a bit dizzy. Will you come with me? Julian asked.
