

Smoke Gets In Your Eyes

After marrying the handsome and wealthy Hugh Kirkwood, all Caitlin wants to do is enjoy her happy ever after. But on the day she learns she is finally pregnant, she catches him in bed with another woman. Before Caitlin can even think of divorce, Hugh and his girlfriend are killed in a mysterious fire. But Caitlin's problems are only just beginning. Hugh took out additional life insurance before he died, the fire turns out to have been started deliberately and the police are now eyeing her up as their number one suspect. Just as Caitlin really feels her life cannot get any worse, fate has one last shock in store.

Smoke Gets in Your Eyes is a romantic suspense with a little bit of humour.

REVIEWS:
Louise Marley has a sharp eye for social conventions and an even sharper tongue about human relationships. The plot is whirlwind, thoroughly good fun; a great way to while away a long train journey.

Irish Tatler Its Jilly Cooper bonking territory in rural England. Written with a laconic sense of humour and an insider's knowledge of hierarchical snobberies and ambitions.

Mayo News After some comic romping in the opening pages it settles down to a romantic murder-mystery, with unexpected twists and plenty of comedy, suspense and a dramatic ending.
