

Her dream honeymoon in Australia took a nasty turn when death came calling on the same road where her father had been killed two years earlier. Coincidence or suspicious? Tess had to find out. This is book 3 of the Doctor Tess series and is a STANDALONE romantic thriller of 30,000 words (109 pages). I think of it as medical thriller meets sweet romance. Book 1 is SUDDEN DEATH. Book 2 is YOUNG BLOOD. The Story Starts... Unexpectedly, and without being invited, something in the on-board movie took Dr. Jayson Riggings back to that frightening day when he was 14 years old. He and his school mate Malcolm were visiting Malcolms grandfather. The man, only in his fifties, had been diagnosed with Huntingtons Disease which meant all he had to look forward to was a slow one-way trip to a tragic death. The diagnosis had devastated the man and he was having a hard time getting back on the saddle, with the battle made worse by the fact hed been recently laid off from his job. Hed been with the company for 23 years but now his chosen career had collapsed too. Hed had two big hits in the same month, and his family was trying to keep close to help him climb out of the deep hole hed been pushed into. It was Friday the 13th and Malcolms mother was unduly superstitious so she made her son go visit Grandfather after school. Jayson went with him. As they walked the two blocks to the dear old fellows house, Malcolm told Jayson his grandfather was tight with his money. He didnt waste water, he recycled as much stuff as he could and he turned the light off every time he left a room. Yes, my grandparents are like that too, said Jayson. Malcolm called out Howdy Granddad but there was no response. He might be having an afternoon sleep, said Jayson. You go inside and Ill go around the back to see if hes in the garden. Out the back, there were two overgrown garden beds and an old window-less shed. The wooden door was ajar, just a little. Hello? No reply. No sign of Malcolms grandfather in the garden either. Jayson could see through the gap in the doorway. It was dark inside the shed. He gingerly pushed the door open. As he did, the rusty hinge creaked. To his right, he saw a small cone of light from a tiny lamp, pointing down at a workbench. A light was on? In the middle of the day? A shiver of fear jolted through Jaysons mind and body. Hello? Again, no reply. By taking another step forward, into the darkness, 14 year old Jayson could see there was a big workbench in the center of the shed. It was covered with bits of wood and metal and all manner of dusty tools lying around waiting for the next job. Granddad? Again no reply. Something wasnt right. Something was very wrong. With his heart pounding, Jayson slowly edged forward as his eyes began to adjust to the darkness. Behind the door, just one step away, was Malcolms grandfather. Lying on the ground. Still. There was a pool of dried blood under his head and a shotgun nearby. Police would later confirm the fingerprints on the trigger belonged to the victim.  Thirty-two thousand feet above the Pacific Ocean, Jayson shuddered at the memory, then shook his head several times in an effort to banish the darkness of that haunting experience. Then he looked at the beautiful young woman sitting next to him on the plane, sleeping peacefully as they jetted south on flight QF16. She was now his wife. ----- By Pat Wilpenter, author of inspirational fiction and good clean reads, romantic thrillers, medical thriller books, medical thrillers and mysteries, romantic thrillers christian, medical thrillers, romantic thriller books, medical thrillers kindle books, medical thrillers kindle books, medical thrillers kindle ebook
