I mean, my favorite book growing up (and to this day) is A Wrinkle in Time, but I didn't have a love for reading at all. When I reached the seventh grade we had to read books. She didn't care what books we read, they could be futuristic romance novels, they could be horror, they could even have robot romance in them. She didn't care. The teacher had a lot of sword and sorcery novels in her classroom library, and once I found those, I was hooked. Though, I didn't get into young adult romance until much later. >>>Who should read this book? I know a lot of adults read young adult, and that's awesome. I never pictured my new adult dystopian for teens, but it works out just as well. There's nothing too graphic in my book, and while there's a tiny bit of swearing, I've read much worse. The real audience I was going for are those women out there who love futuristic romance novels and those looking for awesome, robot romance. I find I have a lot in common with women my age, and my characters are typically of the female variety and just starting out in life, so that works. Honestly, these books could work for anyone. >>>Are there any authors who've shaped your writing? I've read a few new adult dystopian books but for the most part these futuristic romance novels weren't inspired by anything except my own wondering on what a future with androids in it might look like. That's when the idea of robot romance came to me.
