

Derby and Kate have been friends since college, and twelve years later they're still going strong. Kate's home is always open to Derby, and since a few months ago they've been working together, too. The company where Kate and Derby are employed take a step forward in their marketing strategies and hire Will, a legend in the business world, and Kate's brother. He's going to be staying for a couple of months. When Derby runs into Will, she expects the arrogant hormonal youngster she knew, but instead she meets a full-grown man that and flames ignite between them. The only problem is Kate. If Derby and Will start a relationship, Derby might lose Kate. If she chooses Kate she'll have to sacrifice Will. When her job throws a curveball at her, Will is there to catch her when she stumbles, and the inevitable happens. A series of unfortunate events leads Kate to answers she didn't want to find, and the biggest misunderstanding of all, threatens to drive the three of them apart. In the end, will Derby choose the one she loves the most, or the one that will be her pillar of strength? Will she get back up when life knocks her down?
