On a dark, lonely stretch of Midwest interstate, Nick Red Shield swerves his pickup and empty horse trailer to avoid a pair of eyes. They belong to a woman--battered, bruised and barely conscious--in desperate need of a lift. Lauren Davis grew up in the high-stakes world of horse racing, a world that took her to fame as a jockey and into a relationship with a dangerous high roller. Life with Raymond Vargas has turned deadly, forcing her on the run, but she cant abandon her son, and now shell do anything to get him back safe. While Nicks instincts as a loner kick into high gear, Laurens vulnerability tugs at him in ways hed shut down long ago. A man more comfortable with horses than people, unable to make peace with a past thats left him scarred, Nicks not sure about secretive Lauren. But he cant just leave her. And he really doesnt want her to go. In the safe haven of his South Dakota ranch, among the magnificent painted horses of Western legend, a bond of trust, truth and passion becomes a lifeline for them both.
