

The Spy Who Kissed Me

Dorothy Parker Award; First digital book nominated for Romantic Times Reviewers Choice Award A comedy romance suspense novel Her mama has been hoping a man would fall in Stans lap. But when a handsome spy dives through the sunroof of her car, Isabel Stan Stanleys pretty sure this wasnt what momma had in mind. A cute smile can help withbut not hidethe hail of bullets. And that name? Oh my that name. CIA agent Kelvin Kapone-with-a-K has managed to survive and thrive in the big bad world, but the burbs and the wannabe romance author could be his greatest challenge in getting out alive, not to mention heart whole It was the early 90s and everyone was watching the first Gulf War on television. Everywhere you went armchair strategists were talking smart bombs and scud studs. Desert Storm came started popping up in stores. Books and magazines about all the cool military tech appeared on stands. Im Proud to be an American was a hit song. It was serious, very serious, but also a bit whacky because the War was on every channel. Maybe it was just me, but I kept thinking, We are watching a war. It wasnt reality TV. It was real TV. When the War didnt have anything new, I watched reruns of Scarecrow and Mrs. King. The War and that show stirred my muse somehow and pretty soon I was also writing. And writing. And writing some more. Yeah, this book was 500 pages in its first draft. O.O I wrote this book on a word processor. And I still had my trusty electric typewriter close at hand. Then I had to get it onto my first computer. I think that was the first time I cut it down. Now it clocks in at about 200 pages. But it was the first novel I finished and Im really glad I didnt give up on it. I had a lot of fun writing it. Then I had to figure out what it was. Im not sure I was ever able to slot it. Its a mix of mystery, suspense, lots of comedy, and yes, the romance. I love a romance. :-) If you like
