

The world at work: Jobs, pay, and skills for 3.5 billion people

In this report, the McKinsey Global Institute explores the demand and supply drivers for global labor over next few decades and examines how demographics, labor supply, and skills are evolving around the world.

The world at work: Matching jobs and skills in Asia. McKinsey Global Institute. December 2012. CONFIDENTIAL AND PROPRIETARY. Any use of this materialThe McKinsey Global Institute June 2012 report, The World at Work: Jobs, Pay, and Skills for 3.5 Billion People, predicts a potential global shortage of 38 to 40Africa's economic growth accelerated after 2000, making it the world's . work: Jobs, pay, and skills for 3.5 billion people, McKinsey Global Institute, June 2012 Read a free sample or buy The World At Work: Jobs, Pay, and Skills for 3.5 Billion People by McKinsey Global Institute, Richard Dobbs, AnuIn the past three decades, technology and globalization have reshaped economies around the world. In the process, a global labour market began to take shapeThe world at work: Jobs, pay, and skills for 3.5 billion people eBook: Dominic Barton, Anu Madgavkar, Richard Dobbs, Susan Lund, Charles Roxburgh, Jamest work: Jo b s, p ay, a n d sk ill s fo r 3 .5 b illio. n p e o p le. McKinsey Global Institute. The world at work: Jobs, pay, and skills for 3.5 billion people. June 2012The world at work: Jobs, pay, and skills for 3.5 billion people. McKinsey Global Institute. 1. In the past three decades, technology and globalization haveIn this report, the McKinsey Global Institute explores the demand and supply drivers for global labor over next few decades and examines how demographics,Compre The world at work: Jobs, pay, and skills for 3.5 billion people (English Edition) de Dominic Barton, Anu Madgavkar, Richard Dobbs, Susan Lund,McKinsey & Company, 2012. The report discusses the future trends that shape the global labour force and analyzes their effects to workers, employers and Read a free sample or buy The World At Work: Jobs, Pay, and Skills for 3.5 Billion People by McKinsey Global Institute, Richard Dobbs, Anu