

The Other Victim

Tony, an academically-gifted teenager, is stabbed in what appears to be a mugging, while enjoying a night on the town. On a luxurious country estate, a lawyer with a chip on his shoulder, is asked to investigate the disappearance of billionaire Fabian Digby. But when Digby's body turns up floating on the Grand Union Canal and police frogmen find Tony's watch on the canal bed, Tony's brother Phil comes under suspicion. The link between the two deaths is Gold, a perfume made by the company that Digby acquired just before his death. But Gold is no ordinary perfume; it seems to have addictive properties.

EXTRACT Phil? an anxious woman's voice answered. Miriam Neuman? said Freeman. Oh it's you, said Mrs. Neuman disappointed. I was phoning to speak to Phil, said Freeman, realizing from Miriam Neuman's reply, and her tone, that he was too late. Oh Mr. Freeman, she sobbed. I don't know what to do. He stormed out half an hour ago. Stormed out? Why? It was after he read what they said about him, she answered, still crying. What who said about him? The Sunday papers. Which Sunday papers? He had read one of the Sunday broadsheets himself and seen nothing about Philip Neuman or the case. She told him the name of the black-top tabloid that her son had read. And what did it say? asked Freeman, puzzled more than frightened by this new development. It presented the evidence against him. It said it wanted to give the readers the chance to consider the evidence that was never put to the jury. And what did he say about it? Freeman had been in a mild panic about Phil's safety as soon as Yaniv had told him about the genetic engineering on the mango plant. But now he was growing increasingly concerned. He said they presented the evidence against him but didn't even bother asking him for his side of the story. Did he say where he was going? There was a few seconds hesitation. He said something about having it out with them. It was like cross-examining a witness for the other side. He was getting nowhere. Only he couldn't lead, because he didn't know the answer. With whom? He didn't say. Can you remember his exact words? He said I'm going to get those bastards who set me up. That was it. That's all I remember. OK thank you, said Freeman. Do you have any idea where he could be Mr. Freeman? No, but I'm to get the paper now. It might give us a few clues. But there's something else The line started to crackle. Mr Freeman? What's that? There was something I didn't tell you something I've known for a long time. Perhaps I should have told you earlier, but The line started to crackle again. Hallo, Mrs Neuman! I can't hear you! I said that Phil The crackling continued unabated. He was driving between tall buildings and this sort of thing often happened. By the time he got clear, the connection had been broken.
